The Women Guides of Maine.

There Are Three of Them Now, But Others Will Join the Ranks—Cornelia T. Crosby, the Pioneer—Better than Men in the Woods and More Skillful on the Water—The Pay They Get With Some Presents.

There are three women in the state of Maine who guide parties that follow the canoe, rod and rifle as a pastime for a few weeks each year. They find the business not only pleasant but profitable and so great has their success been that already the fish and game commissioners are receiving requests from other women who wish to join the ranks of the pioneers of guideswomen.

First the Indians, then the white pioneers and their descendants hunted the deer and moose and whipped the trout streams, incidentally following the trail of a bear or bobcat. In recent years have come thousands of sportsmen from other states, while now, with the parlor cars running to the edge of the hunting grounds women have joined in the chase for big game.

With the coming of the modern Diana with short corduroy skirts and repeating rifles, the woman guide must become a necessity, and that she is a useful and valuable aid in the now fashionable sport of hunting big game is shown by the fact that she is getting more work than any of the 1970 men guides who try to make a living by piloting city sportsmen.

When the rich man of New York or other cities come to Maine nowadays, they often bring along their wives and daughters, and it is a natural enough matter that the women of the party should enjoy greater comfort with a woman guide to look after the numberless little details of the trip and camping life than with a man, no matter how handy he may be, would be likely to bungle.

There are women reared in the woods, who know every lake and stream and every forest path and woodland trail as well as do their husbands and brothers.
They have from childhood been schooled in the use of rifle, rod and paddle, and their practical knowledge of fishing and hunting is as complete and their courage as great as long experience and the spirit of the northern pioneers can make them.

The first woman to attain prominence as a guide was Miss Cornelia T. Crosby of Phillips, known to all readers of newspapers as "Fly Rod," who gained her reputation on the trout streams in the Rangely region. Visiting sportsmen that fishing waters for many years have met her or heard of her or read some of her contributions to the newspapers.

In her early years Miss Crosby whipped the trout streams of Franklin county with a success that excited the envy of anglers from the city who came with costly tackle, and later, when the square tailed trout commenced to bite in the Rangely waters, she continued her success as a successful fisherman. The big land-locked salmon also took kindly to her flies and spoons, and soon the men, who thought they knew all about fishing, acknowledged that Miss Crosby was the only person who could capture the big fish in the lakes.

When the railroads found their way into the Rangely region and other sequestered spots in northern Maine, "Fly Rod" began to find money where she had previously found sport. She was engaged to point out spots where she had landed a big fish and to tell new comers and green anglers how to make and cast a fly.

In a canoe she was always perfectly at home. The way she sent her craft through rough and bright waters made the Penobscot Indians look like old money, and she won the approval of every red man in the state for her skill in that maneuver.

The story goes that during her early years, Miss Crosby was ill of consumption and that doctors had decided she had not long to live. One physician told her that life in the woods and open air was the only remedy for her, and the following winter she spent in a lumber camp. In the spring she was so greatly improved in health that her friends marveled. The improvement was gradual but steady, and today there is not a more healthy woman in the state than Miss Crosby.

Tall and straight as a pine, strong and athletic from constant development of a fine constitution by out-of-door sports "Fly Rod" is a wonder of endurance.
And she is a bright woman, as well.

Being of a practical turn of mind, quick to see and improve an opportunity, she has never failed to lend her aid to ward making known to the attractions of Maine as a hunting and fishing country, and at every great sportsmen's show in Boston and New York, as well as the fairs in the Maine cities and towns she has been seen with her log cabin and extensive retinue of guides, all of whom have been loaded down with a well-sized stock of sporting goods such as is used in their business.

When it comes to shooting, Miss Crosby is almost as expert with the rifle as she is with the rod and reel and it is said that she is the only woman in the state who ever killed a caribou. The deer she has killed are without number; those she has pointed out to hunters would stock a forest, and she has not been without good luck in knocking over a bull moose.

Over in the Dead river region where everyone knows how to shoot and fish, and where fishing next to logging is the principal industry of that far backwoods region, lives Miss Ethel Harlow, now a pretty young woman of 20, who has always had the reputation among the Dead river people of being a smart girl.
She has none of the appearance of a backwoods girl, and while fond of fishing and hunting, which take the place of gold and bicycling on Dead river, she is not at all lacking in the various accomplishments common to other young women.

Before she was out of short skirts she could paddle a canoe, shoot true with a rifle and cast a fly as skillfully as any boy in her neighborhood. With advancing years her skill in these sports increased and finally when the registered guide system was introduced, she applied for registration and received a license.

Miss Harlow is not in the guiding business because she has to make a living that way, but because she is in the sport a good part of the time for her own amusement and might as well combine with sport whatever business opportunities—and, especially since women began to go a-hunting, a good deal of business. She is quick and sure with rifle, and has killed more game of all kinds than most men hunters ever saw, while in all the arts of woodcraft she is an adept.

Mrs. J. S. Freese of Riverton, Argyle, takes a back seat for none of the men who go up and down the Penobscot river when it comes to paddling a canoe, catching a trout or salmon, bringing down a bird on the wing or getting all the big game the Maine law allows.

More than that, she can do a great skill what few of the men can do—tan the skins of all the deer and moose that she or her party may kill.

Mrs. Freese is not obliged to earn her living by hunting or guiding, for her husband is in comfortable circumstances, but she is an ardent sportswoman and through her brother, who is a professional guide, she became acquainted with many New York and Philadelphia sportsmen who every year come to Maine to hunt and fish. Most of these visitors are accompanied by their wives and children, making the services of a woman guide desirable.

When the New York women come to the hunting regions they often bring a lot of furniture, china and even silverware, cords of bedding and all sorts of things which they fancy are necessary for comfort in camp, and all these must be transported, and having reached their place must be unpacked and suitably arranged.

Often the women of the party have a camp separate from that of the men, and the construction and arrangement of their quarters involve a great deal of labor that would tire out the visitors and take all the enjoyment out of their trip, even if they were able to do the work, which most of them are not. In such cases the services of a woman like Mrs. Freese are invaluable, and she is in great demand all through the fishing and hunting season.

Strong and active with the knowledge of an old woodsman and the skill of a veteran hunter, Mrs. Freese goes through these campaigns much as if they were an ordinary woman would through a shopping trip, getting as much enjoyment out of it as any of the party, and also more money than most men in the woods can earn.

People around Argyle marvel at Mrs.
Freese's skill and daring in a canoe, and used as they are to seeing frail birches in rough water, they tremble with apprehension when they see their townsman paddle down into the white water around Evans Point, one of the wildest places the whole length of the Penobscot, and the Penobscot is no babbling brook at any part of its course. She goes down there for the fun of it, as she says, but other people call it dangerous fun.

It is the business of a guide to find good hunting grounds or good fishing waters; to prepare the camp, make the fires, do the cooking and perform all the drudgery of the trip, leaving the party free to enjoy the sport. The women guides of Maine are capable of doing all this work in the best style, and, of course, the women are better cooks than most of the men.

The guides are also expected to see to it that the camp fires do not ignite the timber, causing destructive fires, and to observe the game laws strictly and report any violations besides making annual reports to the game commissioners of the number of deer and moose killed and the quantities of fish taken by parties under their care.

The pay is $3 a day from the parties employing the guides, but frequently they receive from generous sportsmen handsome gifts. One guide recently received from a New York banker a gift of $500. The women, it is fair to presume, will be at least as fortunate in this respect as are the men.

Children's Corner.

A Boy's Story of the Spanish-American War.

Have many of the brave boys and girls ever heard of the Spanish-American war? It was the war of April, 1898, when we declared against Spain. It was the Spanish who caused this war.

They were trying to starve the Cubans to death, and this was not all. The Maine was the quiet harbor of Havana and on the 15th of February, 1898, the Spanish put torpedoes under her and blew her up. This caused quite a sensation throughout the United States.
When they heard the sad news they were grief stricken at these words.
Many a noble hero went down under the enemies' guns.

Strange Sight in a Graveyard.

There are eighteen graveyards located in the town of Windham, and the strangest device of all to mark a burial spot is to be found in the old Smith graveyard, and on the 15th of February, 1898, the Spanish put torpedoes under her and
blew her up. This caused quite a sensation throughout the United States.

It is probable that Annie Russell Marble's article on Francis Hopkinson would be selected by the majority of readers as the leading article in the November New England Magazine. It shows the influence of the satirist—and few were ever cleverer than this signer of the Declaration.

It is probable that Annie Russell Mar-

be selected by the majority of readers as
the leading article in the November
New England Magazine. It shows the
ever cleverer than this signer of the Declaration.

"The Pupils of Uncle Sam."

The story is carefully written and will be full of valuable information for parents as well as the children. A description of the games played by the little fellows in Guam, the Philippines and Hawaii will also be described, which is why you should buy or borrow a copy of the next ADVERTISER and please the children.

Sampson, whose guest he was, spent a night in the woods last week. The next morning he returned to camp after getting breakfast at the McAllister's. For three days Mr. Bagley had stayed in camp because of rain and becoming impatient he took the opportunity to go on the trail as game there was a bit of letup in falling water. He had been gone from camp about an hour when Woodman called to him and received an answer. A half hour later a rifle shot was fired and Bagley also responded, but after that nothing was heard from him. Edward by his success in putting a wildcat to rest near Camp Comus, Col. Frank L. Taylor spent a few days the last week in the woods of northern Maine hunting deer and moose. He returned Tuesday night, empty-handed, but with a big supply of game stories picked up during his sojourn in that region. The story of his putting the wildcat to rest has gained for Col. Taylor an enviable reputation among hunters who haven't yet become tired of listening to the blood-curdling tale of his near escape from death. For weeks Col. Taylor has spent much of his time at the camp on the shore of the lake, where he has entertained many friends. Some few nights ago there was a big commotion near the back window of the camp, and the Colonel, taking his rifle and a few shots, poked into the darkness. In quest of the disturber, he was accompanied by Arthur Gage, and both men claimed to have fired several shots at the supposed animal. A careful search the next morning, however, failed to reveal the cause of the dead animal, which leads to the belief that the deer was the disturber. ## NORWAY AND VICINITY

Roll Call and Fiftieth Anniversary.
The annual roll-call of the Congregational church and other exercises will occur Thursday evening, Nov. 20th. These exercises the occasions of great pleasure and profit, both in the inspiration that comes from so large a number gathered together, talking of the things of the Kingdom in the pleasure of meeting those not often seen, and in the reading of letters from absent friends. Sometimes practical and valuable suggestions for the work of the church are brought out, and new courage is given the workers by the sympathy of others who are earnest if not so active.

The fiftieth anniversary of the village Congregational church will be on the 18th of January next.

Appearance of Uncle Tom.
Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin was presented at the Opera House Thursday evening. The company came from Hartford, Conn., and consequently did not arrive until afternoon. The parade was at five o'clock and could hardly be seen to advantage, but it drew a crowd of children and some older ones, and made things seem lively for awhile. The band and drum corps were excellent, and there were unique features as advertised. The opera house was well filled in the evening and the performance was very good. The company had their own orchestra of six. All the parts were well taken, the clown parts not being overdone, and the subordinate parts not being slighted.

Special features were a male quartet and a female quartet, who appeared twice each and also responded to encores. These quartets united and appeared in a cakewalk, the four couples going through some new as well as familiar evolutions, and receiving hearty applause.

An Attempt to Slay Deer by Revolver Shot, which Proved Unsuccessful. Camps Deerfield and McKinley Opened. Woman Hunter Makes Reputation for Herself. Other Matters.

(Edited by O. Warren Brown.)

Frank Hayden came across three deer near North pond last week and tried his luck shooting them with a .44. calibre Smith and Wesson revolver. Mr. Hayden is regarded as one of the best revolver shots in this section of the State and naturally enough he expected to bring down his game after taking aim at them which was pretty deliberate. He emptied the five chambers of his weapon into the crowd, but didn't touch one. They took to the water and a half hour afterward were on the other side of the pond safe from harm and revolver shooters.

Camp McKinley, owned by Norway men, will be opened this week with some ceremony. Those to take part in the event are E. C. Thompson, Harry and Frank Lovejoy and a few others.

From Upton comes this startling yarn: "Percy Ford shot a fine buck recently which dressed 225 pounds. It was the best head ever seen in Upton, so the sportsmen all say. Mr. Ford did not kill him the first shot so followed him about three hours before coming up with him, and thinking he was dead he sat down on him to cut his throat when the deer not used to having anyone on his back got up and started with Percy on his back. He says he had a fast ride for a few rods and does not care to try it again at present."

John A. Woodman and Dr. H. M. Wells went to Camp Medford, East Stoneham, Saturday, to remain a few days.

A party of five from Lewiston drove through town, Friday night, headed for East Stoneham, where they will do a little hunting. They had a good supply of camping necessities, and purchased a good many more before getting out of Norway.

From East Stoneham I hear that the fox captured by Mell Sampson and mentioned in this column last week had given "Nimrod" a good deal of trouble since Camp Medford was opened. Mell chased him for two days, and finally lost him, but the third day found him in a trap and ended his life with a shot from his repeater.

It is reported that a moose has been seen recently at South Waterford; also tracks have been seen by some hunters resembling a moose's tracks as described.

Stephen McKee of East Stoneham shot a large deer a few days ago. It is reported the bears have been seen occasionally in some places a few miles distant.

EAST STONEHAM.

A Smart Aged Man.

We can boast of having one very smart and able old man in this town and who has performed an amount of labor which few young men could or would do.

Isaiah McAllister, aged 75 years, assures us that the past season he has planted and hoed 2½ acres of burnt land corn, 1 acre of potatoes and ¼ acre of beans on ploughed land. Besides, he has taken care of two cows and had the entire care of two hogs, also cut the wood for the family use and has done other chores about the buildings and farm. Beat it if you can! Mr. McAllister is a remarkably vigorous man for his years, never uses tobacco, is temperate in his habits and of a pleasant and even disposition. It does one good to see him and have a chat with him.

Mrs. Jane Walker is at her brother's, James Field's.

Mrs. Mary Moore visited at her brother's the past week.

We have been favored with fine warm days for November.

The Adventists hold meetings every Sunday a. m. in G. A. R. hall. Congregational church hold meetings every Sunday p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Parker visited relatives at Bryant's Pond last week. They found Mr. and Mrs. John Littlefield as comfortable as could be expected in their present state of health.

I am told that one of Mell Sampson's boarders, who went out gunning, got lost and did not find his way back to the camp till the next morning. To one who has been accustomed to city life our forests are crooked and hard to travel.

I read in the last copy of your paper of an old man being lost. Perhaps it may have been the same man seen on the road between Lynchville and Bethel about a week ago by two of our citizens who were passing that way. This old man said he was sick. He had built a fire by the side of the road to keep warm. He said he had been to the Soldier's Home.

Will Smith of Stow was at J. Q. Mason's, Friday night.

Charles Wilson of Norway visited at S. D. Wilson's, Thursday and Friday.

Freeman McKee has been visiting his brother Stephen at Lynchville the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson and little daughter spent the day at Nell Andrews' last Sunday.

Mrs. S. J. Hill is having her house shingled. Also Benj. McKee is shingling his barn.

Lewis E. McAllister looks very pleased when he speaks of his new boarder. It is another daughter.

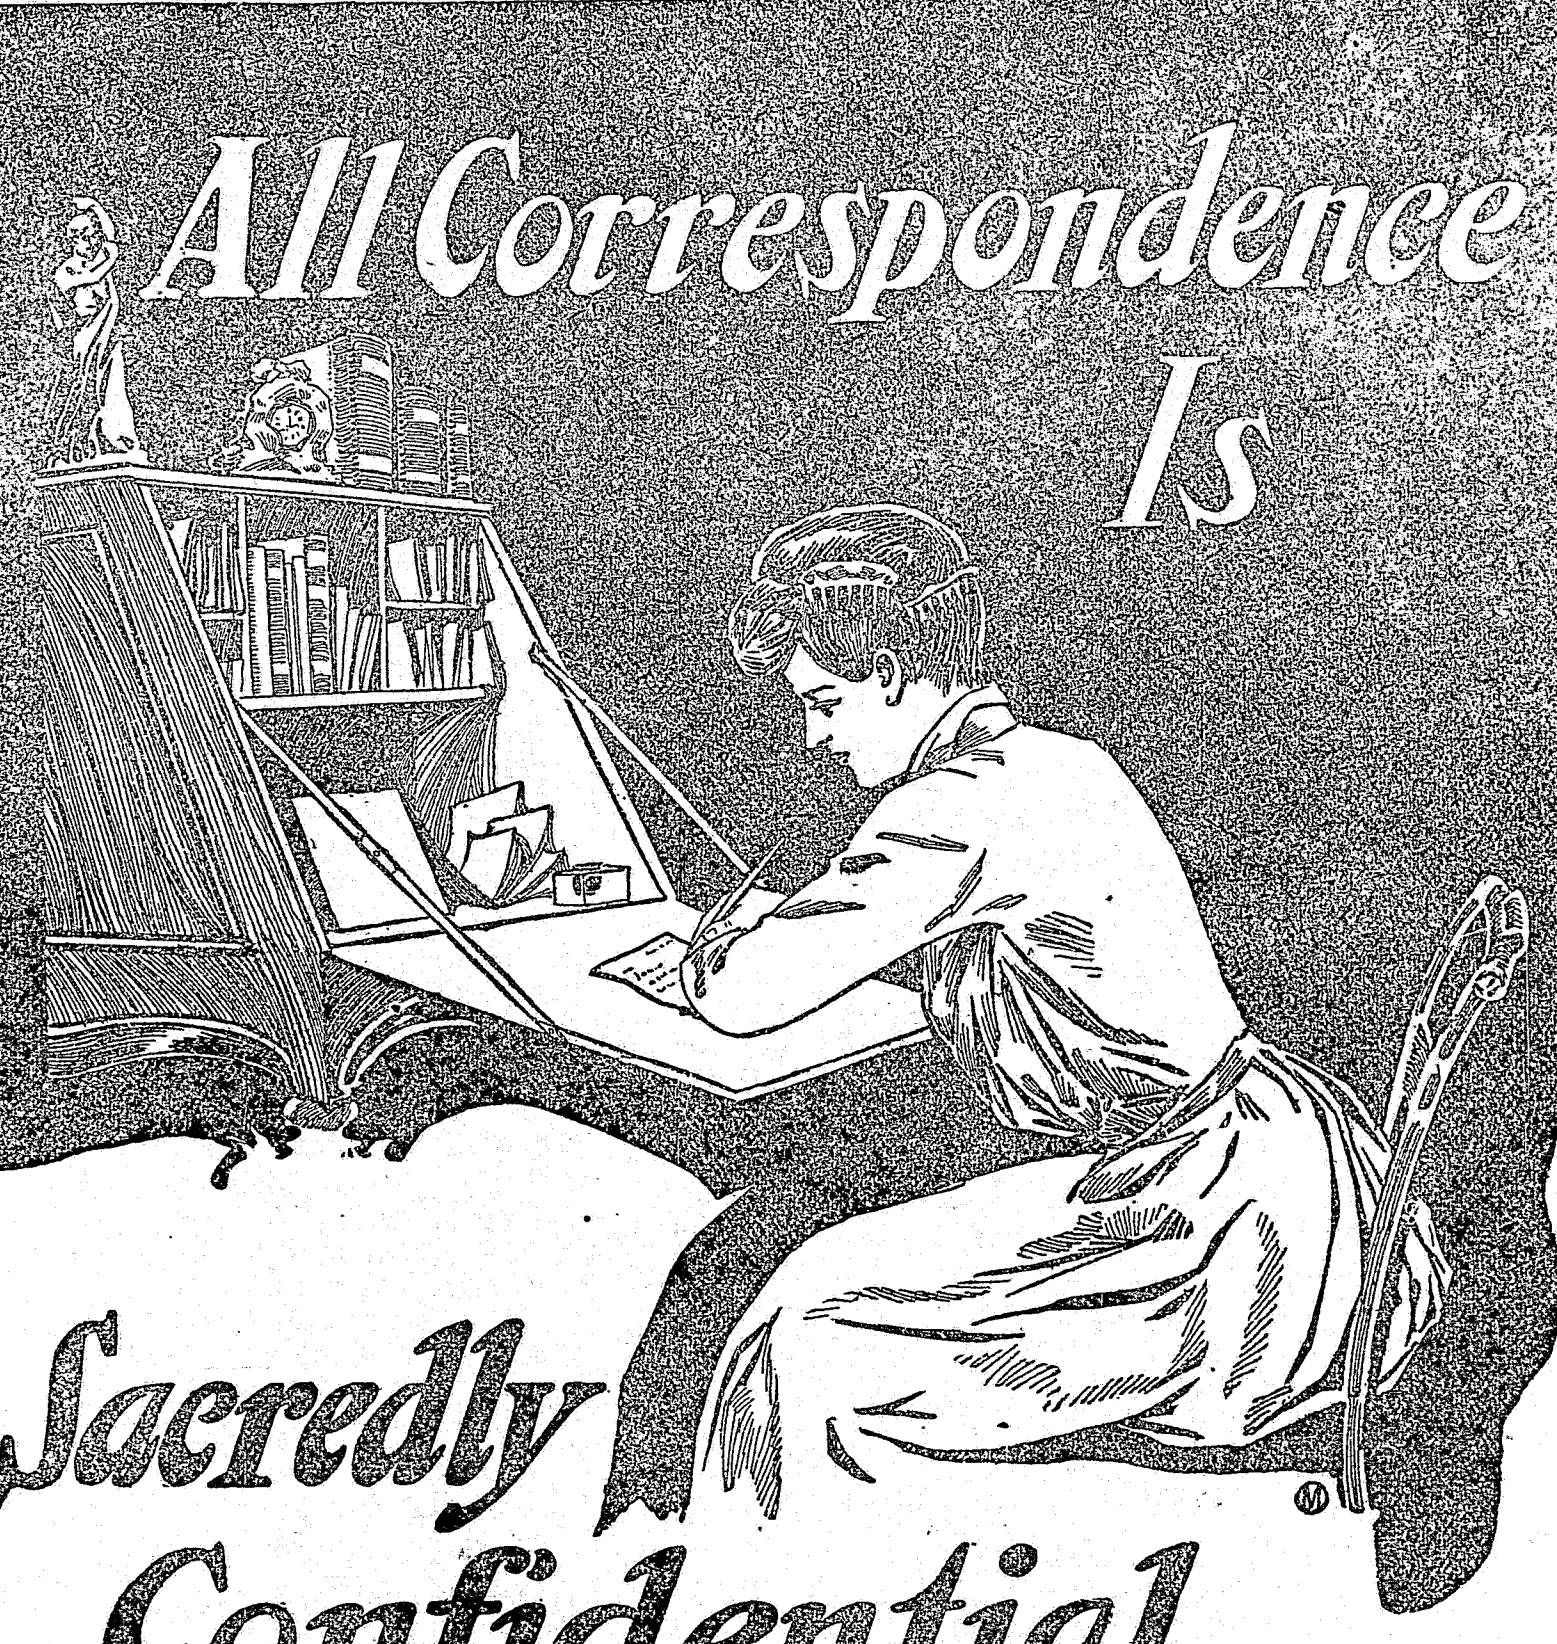

E. McAllister of No. 4 and A. E. McAllister of West Lovell were at E. O. McAllister's Friday night.

The young people of this place were at C. F. Wilson's, Wednesday night. An extra good time was enjoyed by all.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

All Correspondence Is

Sacredly Confidential

This is a very important consideration in a woman's correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. It is a great satisfaction to feel that one woman can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, — a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and with a knowledge of woman's ills greater than that possessed by any other person.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

The reason Mrs. Pinkham is so amply qualified to give advice in cases of female ills is for the reason that over one hundred thousand cases come before her each year, — some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and after day. Twenty years of constant success, — think of the knowledge thus gained. Surely, women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

As an illustration of the good coming from such advice we herewith publish two letters and portrait of Miss Hattie DeGroat, the reading of which should give every sick woman confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's ability to help them. This is only one of thousands of the same kind of letters which Mrs. Pinkham has on file.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I have read with interest your advice to others so much that I thought I would write to you, for I have been suffering for a long time. I have such bearing-down pains, and such shooting pains go through me. I have headache, backache, and feel tired. Menstruation is very painful, sometimes have to stop work and lie down. My stomach is bad, and I am troubled with whites. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain, Yours truly,
Miss HATTIE DEGROAT, Succasunna, N. J."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I can hardly find words to thank you for your advice and wonderful Vegetable Compound. I was in a terrible state, every part of my body ached, was very nervous, had hysterical spells. I think I would have become insane had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Your letter told me just what to do, and your medicine cured me, and I cannot express my thanks." March 8th, 1901.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends. Do not be persuaded that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who suggests something else is seeking a larger profit. Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that the thousands of cures are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Andrews McDonald.
Roann Keen, wife of the late Andrews McDonald of Bridgton, was born in Oxford, July 13, 1820, and departed this life Oct. 15, 1902. She was united in marriage with Andrews McDonald in 1846. To them were born four sons and three daughters, all of whom survive except two sons, George and Charles.

Mrs. McDonald was converted under the labors of Elder Libby, father of the Rev. James Albert Libby, and united with the Free Baptist church in Poland at the age of nineteen and for more than sixty years lived a devoted Christian life. Mrs. McDonald resided in Bridgton for 31 years. Among the near relatives present at her funeral were her daughters, Mrs. John Shennett of South Millford, Mass.; Mrs. G. D. Holmes of Lewiston; Mrs. Geo. Hale of Bridgton, and the widow of the late Charles McDonald. Also her son, Edward A. McDonald of Somerville, Mass.

A Waste of Words.
A writer in a current magazine wastes about fifteen hundred words in an attempt to prove that the higher education tends to lessen the physical beauty of women. He points to the fact that many of the most "advanced" women have been the ugliest, and argues that the women who distinguish themselves by their intellect are seldom those of the greatest beauty. This writer manifestly mistakes cause for effect, for no woman who was physically beautiful in the beginning ever became ugly because of the fact that she burned incense at the shrine of higher education, providing she did not allow her vanity to interfere with independence in the proper amount of physical exercise. Many women naturally beautiful have been satisfied to let it go at that; many naturally ugly in face and form have, through an intelligent use of their opportunities, made themselves beautiful.

The thought that we are the actual creators of the world's future is one that must lead us with a sense of responsibility that will be intolerable or inspiring according to our disposition. Yet, when we speculate about the condition of the world in the coming century we do not realize that things in that age will be what we make them. Mr. Wells makes this point very clear in his study of "Mankind in the Making" in the November Cosmopolitan.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork" was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request. Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

WEST PARIS.

A Runaway.
A runaway horse caused no little excitement one afternoon, last week.
Francis Hammond from South Woodstock came over to the station to meet two ladies from Boston. The ladies were well seated in the wagon to return and Mr. Hammond was just sitting down when the rein caught under the wheel, the horse turning round and round around the corner of White's drug store towards Small's, ran into a team hitched there and cleared himself from the wagon throwing the ladies to the sidewalk in front of the store.
Doctors were soon on the scene, but strange to say none of them were seriously hurt, for which they must think themselves very fortunate. The horse was caught near O. D. Ellingwood's. The harness was broken up a good deal. Al Estes took the old gentleman home and Leon Berry the ladies.
Mr. Hammond has been confined to his bed since the accident but is some better.

Quite a lot from the South Paris high school came to Saturday to attend the entertainment and social given by the School Improvement League. All had a general good time.
Mr. White of Greene, who came in exchange with Ernest M. Holman to the F. B. church last Sunday, preached a very interesting sermon in the morning and another in the evening with special music. Mr. White sang solos at both services.
Walter Curtis, who is driving a span of horses for the Paris Mfg. Co., got hurt by them Monday noon, while feeding them. They took fright at some leaves blown down from the trees and ran over Mr. Curtis, cutting a gash in his head and another in one leg. Nothing at all serious as at first supposed.
Rev. R. A. Rich is conducting meetings at the M. E. Church at North Paris every night this week. Rev. H. A. Brown of Bryant's Pond is preaching for him. The meetings will be continued every night next week at the Baptist church and Rev. R. A. Rich will preach. Mrs. H. A. Brown will furnish excellent solo singing throughout the meetings.
